KP Morrow Landscaping Co. has built its business through word-of-mouth referrals because they strive to partner with their clients and put purpose over profit. Inset: (L-R) Kurt Pyle, Rex London, Brandon Marrow, and Andrew Marrow

In a competitive industry teeming with creative professionals, KP Morrow Landscaping Co. stands out by putting relationships at the heart of everything they do.

For them, it's not just about designing beautiful outdoor spaces — it's about creating places that inspire connection and reflect the unique visions of their clients. KP Morrow Landscaping Co. designers take the time to truly listen, ensuring every project feels personal, thoughtful, and completely tailored. Their transparent, collaborative approach ensures clients are involved and valued every step of the way, turning what could be a transactional process into a meaningful partnership.

What really sets them apart is their "why," according to co-owner Brandon Marrow. The KP Morrow team doesn't just install softscapes and hardscapes — they help people find joy and connection right in their own back yards. By focusing on purpose over profit, they've built a reputation for trust, authenticity, and quality. Their clients don't just walk away with a gorgeous yard; they walk away feeling heard.

With most of their business coming from word-of-mouth referrals, it's clear their work speaks for itself.

"The landscape design-build industry is filled with talented professionals and creative ideas," Morrow said. But, in a highly competitive market, the company sees competition not as a threat but as fuel to keep innovating.

By staying true to its values and raising the bar with every project, the company has created something more than a landscaping service — they've built a community of loyal clients who have experienced their "why" firsthand. "It's our dedication to [our] principles that resonates with people and earns their trust and business," said Morrow. And, he added, exceptional craftsmanship with each project goes a long way, too.

Brandon and Andrew Morrow co-own KP Morrow Landscaping Co. alongside Kurt Pyle, Rex London, their foreman, rounds out the team with an extensive background in design and construction. "With Andrew's amazing design skills, Kurt's superior skills in the construction of large-scale hardscape projects and my project management skills, we [are] a well-oiled machine," said Brandon Morrow. Their small size lets them focus on high-level craftsmanship and nurture meaningful relationships that drive their word-of-mouth business.

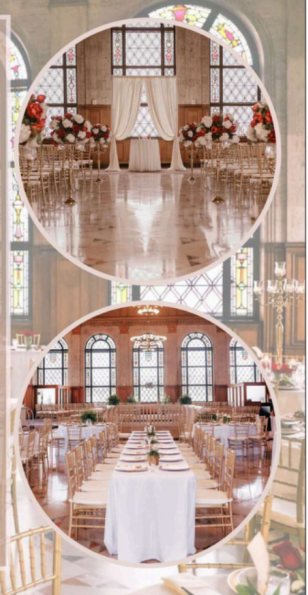

KP Morrow offers services such as pavers, poolsapes, outdoor kitchens, retaining wall systems, pavilions, and softscapes. The stunning before-and-after transformations attest to their commitment to the art of landscaping, turning blank canvases into spaces that combine aesthetics and functionality. Each project is a careful merger of client visions, imagination, and skill to create lasting masterpieces. 🍷
